Rocks, Snakes & the Art of Desert Cooking

a Vision4Media Entertainment Production

Logline: A TV tabloid hustler and a missing U.S. Senator embark upon a dangerous desert quest that reveals a great secret wrapped in a deadly truth.

Hosting a top-rated, network talk show, TV tabloid hustler, J.T. Steele lives on the edge - oblivious to the fact that he's close to losing all that's most precious to him. Formerly a successful investigative reporter, J.T. traded his integrity for the more lucrative role of ring leader to a high-definition, freak act. After being injured in a fight during a live broadcast, J.T. decides he needs a short sabbatical. In the midst of an impromptu desert getaway, his car blows a tire on a deserted, tumbleweed, ridden road. Finding himself completely stranded, J.T. is "rescued" by a patrolling tow truck. A rough-looking, good Samaritan named Jerry Fuller emerges from the vehicle. The opposite of J.T. - Jerry stands out as a much older, tough "desert rat", who makes his life in the harsh desolation.

Behind Jerry's rugged appearance, J.T. happens to notice something...

His investigative reporter instincts kick in. Being someone who never forgets a face, J.T. soon realizes Jerry to be a missing U.S. Senator, once groomed for the presidency, who mysteriously disappeared from public view years earlier. Jerry refuses to answer all of J.T.'s sudden questions. Instead, he beguiles J.T. to join him on a three-day, desert backpacking trek in exchange for a story no top ex-reporter could refuse - the answer to the mystery of his disappearance.

Unbeknownst to J.T., Jerry embarks on a hidden agenda to awaken J.T. to a different reality... Even if it means J.T. must lose his life in order to find another.
